ERF 31st Annual Conference

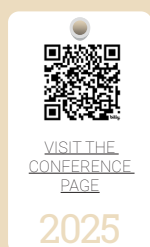

The Economic Research Forum's (ERF) Annual Conference, a tradition maintained since 1995, has become the premier event for economists of the Middle East; where new ideas are created and disseminated, where the community of researchers meet, and where excellence is celebrated. This year's conference marks the 31st anniversary of ERF, which was established in 1993 to lead and support the production of independent, high quality economic research, and to disseminate research output to a wide and diverse audience.

This year's conference is held on the theme of Youth, Demographic Dividend and Migration in MENA: Challenges and Opportunities in Uncertain Times. It will be held 27 – 29 April, 2025 in Cairo, Egypt. This is a timely topic in light of the significant political, social, and economic challenges witnessed in the region.

The plenary sessions aim to address the multifaceted challenges and opportunities related to youth, migration, and economic development in the MENA region. They will feature distinguished economists and thought leaders to provide valuable, thought-provoking ideas and viewpoints to take forward the region's agenda towards economic growth and sustainable development.

This year, the conference is designed to also include one policy dialogue, two keynote speeches, two special panels, and 22 parallel sessions. The parallel sessions will feature 66 diverse papers across cross-cutting critical themes selected on the basis of rigorous refereeing processes in response to an open call for papers. The closing plenary will celebrate the winners of what has become a regional certificate of excellence: The Best Paper Award. ERF Annual Conferences also provide the opportunity for ERF Research Fellows to convene their annual meeting.

ERF gratefully acknowledges support from French Development Agency (AFD) and International Development Research Center (IDRC), Canada.

DAY 1 | Sunday, April 27

9:00 – 17:30

Opening Ceremony & Keynote Speeches

Youth and the Desire of Individuals for Control over their Own Lives: Human Development in the Arab Region

The keynote speech will explore the potential link between human development and emigration, framed within the broader context of the demographic dividend in the Arab region. When a substantial proportion of young individuals consider emigration, the potential benefits of the demographic dividend are undermined. This trend suggests that limitations in human development, particularly in autonomy, education, and income sufficiency, may play a critical role in these decisions.

Migration and Displacement: Challenges and Opportunities

The keynote speech will explore the complexities surrounding labor migration in the MENA region, specifically examining the challenges and opportunities from the perspective of countries of origin. It will explore the relationship between human capital, the labor market, and migration, shedding light on how these factors shape outcomes for both migrants and their home countries. Additionally, the speech will address the profound implications of forced migration and displacement within the region, highlighting the impact on human capital investment. In particular, it will focus on how these migration flows influence the labor market prospects and economic integration of young individuals in host countries. The discussion will provide a nuanced understanding of how migration—both voluntary and forced—affects the development of human development in the MENA region.

Special Panel A: Recent Trends in the Egyptian Labor Market

Employment, Earnings, Digitalization, and the Green Transition

In late 2023, ERF implemented the fifth wave of the Egypt Labor Market Panel Survey (ELMPS 2023). This session will highlight some of the most notable results of this rich longitudinal survey. The results highlighted will focus in developments in the structure and quality of employment, earnings and earnings inequality, the use of information and communication technology at work, and a mapping of green jobs in the Egyptian economy.

Special Panel B: Global Value Chains

Global Value Chains and Sustainable Development

This session will examine an important and policy relevant issue for the MENA region, namely, Global Value Chains from a sustainable development perspective. Three papers will be presented addressing Sustainable Global Development in different ways. First, from an industrial and macroeconomic perspective (SDG9), the first paper examines the role of undervaluation in promoting GVC. Second, in line with SDG7 and SDG13, the second paper analyzes the impact of environmental stringency on firm's participation in GVCs. Finally, in line with SDG16, the third paper examines how political connections affect GVC participation using firm level data.

Policy Dialogue on Renewable Energy in Promoting Growth

Policy Dialogue on Renewable Energy in Promoting Growth, Food Security, and Climate Resilience

The nexus of water, food, and energy is critical to achieving sustainable development. Renewable energy plays a pivotal role in this nexus by providing clean and reliable energy solutions that support water management and agricultural productivity. Organized in partnership with IDRC, this session will explore how integrated policy approaches can harness the potential of renewable energy to drive economic growth, ensure food security, and enhance climate resilience. Two case studies supported by IDRC will be highlighted. One related to Micro, Small, and Medium Enterprises (MSMEs) and solar-powered desalination for irrigation. The session aims to share latest research recommendations to senior policymakers from Egypt and Morocco.
